He was a member of the Artillery Corps for six years during World War I and spent most of his time at the front where he won the bronze cross for distinguished service.

Ezio Pinza made his debut at the Metropolitan on November 1, 1926, in Spontini's "La Vestale." It was in 1929 that his characterization of "Don Giovanni" caused the sensation that acclaimed him as one of the greatest singers and actors to appear on any operatic stage.

Among those which show most originality are a pink cow, a hippopotamus in orange overalls, a lavender cat, and a black and white spotted mother pig with three small baby pigs.

The library display case is now being devoted entirely to hobbies by student members and student groups.

"We want the library to play a part both in study and in leisure time activities," said Miss Smith. "We want to make the library the center of College activities."

Teach Freshmen About Winthrop

THIS WEEK THE JOHNSONIAN IS PRINTING A LETTER IN "Campus Town Hall" which suggests that an orientation course for freshmen be added to the College curriculum next year. As pointed out in the letter, such a course has many advantages.

It is true that the orientation week is a strenuous one for the freshmen. In a completely new surroundings and under the strain of taking various types of examinations, they cannot be expected to remember the bits of information about Winthrop which they receive from the faculty, the Administration, and their counselors.

A Winthrop student should know something about her College—its founding and purpose, its buildings and grounds, and its means of support. The only logical way for every freshman to receive such information would be to include it in the curriculum and require that every freshman take the course during her first year at Winthrop.

It would be reasonably simple to combine such a course with "The Use of the Library" which is now required of all entering students. By adding several additional lecture periods, Winthrop's history could be taught to the freshmen by the library staff, and upperclassmen could explain the College's traditions to the classes. Short lectures by the Registrar, the Business Manager, the Administrative Director, the Academic Dean, and perhaps others would be helpful in teaching the new students how these offices contribute to each student's welfare and in what ways these offices function for the student's benefit.

Having received such information at the beginning of their college life, the freshmen would feel that they were more a part of the College because they would understand its background and have some insight into the manner in which the College serves them. The freshmen would also realize what was expected of them as a Winthrop student.

If upperclassmen and the present freshmen feel that they would have liked and would have benefited from such instruction, it is suggested that they mention the fact to the proper authorities. If the College officials feel that orientation lectures would be wise and profitable, perhaps several lectures can be included in the curriculum next fall.

Your Hospitality — Your Dividends

FOR THE PAST SEVERAL WEEKS ENDS WINTHROP has been hostess to thousands of high school and college students who were on the campus for the convention of the South Carolina Federation of Social Service, the Music Festival, the JHA convention, and the Episcopal students' convention, to mention a few.

The hospitable manner in which Winthrop girls have treated these visitors deserves a few words of commendation. The friendly and helpful attitude of the Winthrop students will be taken in regard to these campus guests speaks well for them and the College.

Noting the friendly atmosphere on the campus, one can assume that many of the high school girls will consider coming to Winthrop after they graduate. This same friendly atmosphere can be assumed to strengthen the bonds of friendship between Winthrop students and visitors on the campus from other colleges in South Carolina.

So in spite of the many activities which constantly vie for one's limited time, the Winthrop students who take time out to be hospitable, gracious, and helpful to the many campus visitors can see that such behavior pays big dividends in new friendships made and the establishment of the impression that the friendliest college student body in the State is to be found on the Winthrop campus.

A Step Forward

FOR YEARS THE TWO PARLORS IN MAIN BUILDING have been an eyesore in every sense of the word. Dark, dull, drab, dreary, depressing—these and other words have been used by students in the past to describe the appearance of the parlors. In the future, however, opposite synonyms will be used to depict the appearance of the parlors.

Having recognized the need for renovating and redecorating the parlors, the Administrative officials have secured the services of an experienced and skilled interior decorator. Within a few weeks, it is hoped that work will be completed which will transform the Main building eyesores into a more pleasing appearance.

"Thank You" And A Reminder

HATS OFF TO MR. ORAN S. POE, new manager of the College farm.

Mr. Poe has received many favorable comments from students for the delicious ice cream being served in the Dining hall. He has secured a new formula and has done extensive experimenting in order to provide good "creamy" ice cream for Winthrop students.

Conditions in the Dining hall have steadily improved for the last few years, but there is still room for improvement. Pointers which were stressed during Etiquette Week need to be remembered and practiced at every meal.

First, there is the matter of being reverent while grace is being sung. Students have been asked not to begin serving their plates until the blessing has been completed.

Second, good etiquette demands that complete silence be maintained while the announcements are being made. Students who insist on talking during the announcements keep others from hearing notices which oftentimes apply to them. Such thoughtlessness as this needs to be corrected.

Third, good manners at the table are necessary for a more pleasant atmosphere in the Dining hall. With a little thought on the part of each student, etiquette rules would not be violated and as a result, every meal would be much more enjoyable.

What We Live By

The Johnsonian wants to deserve a reputation for accuracy, thoroughness, and fairness in covering the Winthrop college campus. You will do us a favor if you call our attention to any failure in measuring up to any of these fundamentals of good newspapering.

Casualty

By MARIAN BAKER

It looked like "old home week" on the campus last Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. Perhaps you, too, noticed the large number of veterans (former Winthrop graduates, that is) who played their alma mater a visit over the week end. When questioned, they inevitably answered "It's good to be back," which leads us to conclude that if Winthrop doesn't get you B.G. (before graduation), it gets you A.G. (after graduation), and you will probably find yourself returning "inside these gates" time after time.

On the Screen The film of Winthrop students called "Softball For Girls" which was made on the campus the first of the week by Coronet Instructional Films of Glenview, Ill., is quite a feather in the College's cap. Made in technicolor, the film will be shown in school and community theaters throughout the country to demonstrate correct techniques in softball form. It will show in the title that it was made at Winthrop college.

Over the Top Claiming the College's highest "Hooper rating" last week was the "Miss Winthrop" contest. The expense—a total of over 15,000 nickels—was more than made up for by the goal of $200 was exceeded by $598, because the final count disclosed that the contest had netted $793. The excitement caused by the final tabulation Thursday afternoon rivaled that of the recent campus elections.

To The Festival Winthrop was well represented at the Azalea Festival this week. Jean Crouch, "Miss South Carolina" and Ann Throther, "Miss Winthrop"; Claudia Anne Summers, "Miss Orangeburg"; Rubie Fore, "Miss Dillon County"; and Imogene Watson, "Miss Conway," passed before thousands of pairs of eyes in the opening parade. The Winthrop Band and its five majorettes attended the Festival, too, to participate in some of the festivities.

A Correction Last week a feature concerning the literary maps which were drawn in Miss Edith Walker's English classes stated that the maps took the place of term papers. The Johnsonian wishes to correct this statement. Members of the class report that they do have to write term papers!

Water Premiere Slated for a grand premiere Saturday night after the movie is the Water Pageant under the direction of Captain George W. Leiken. Members of the Swimming club have been working on a unique program for quite awhile, so the debut is anticipated by everyone on the campus.

ANN BOWEN RECEIVES FELLOWSHIP

Miss Ann Bowen, senior from Greenwood, has been appointed a research fellowship to work with Dr. E. Neige Todhunter at the University of Alabama. She plans to do research in the laboratory of human nutrition and work on her masters degree at the same time.

The arrangements for this service for physical education students to bowl in town are made by the College officials and are offered free of charge as a class recreation period.

The Campus Town Hall

More Effective Orientation Week Urged Thanks to the Senate

A LONGER AND MORE EFFECTIVE ORIENTATION

Dear Campus Town Hall,

As a rising sophomore who has presumably completed the orientation program for freshmen, I think that the Administration, the freshmen advisor, the "Y" counselors, and others who have participated in the program deserve a sincere vote of thanks for the help which they have given the bewildered "rats" in becoming adjusted to college life. They have made the transition period easier and more pleasant, and the freshmen appreciate their efforts.

I think, however, that a few suggestions might be made with regard to future orientation programs. It seems to me that too much was expected in the first hectic week of school. At all of the things that the freshmen were told were necessary and important, but in the confusion of strange buildings, unfamiliar faces, and a new routine, I fear that many freshmen were too bewildered to comprehend all of the information which they were given. The entrance examinations alone were enough to exhaust even an upperclassman, to say nothing of the struggle of getting settled and the fight against homesickness.

I do not wish to criticize the strenuousness of orientation week as much as I wish to bring out the fact that freshmen lose valuable information because it is given during a period of stress. It is well known that the tendency to be spread out over a longer period of time, I believe that it would be more helpful to freshmen. Of course, a type of orientation is carried on in dormitory "Y" groups and in freshmen class meetings throughout most of the year, but it seems to me that perhaps a longer period of orientation might be held during a part, if not all of the first semester. More information might be included than is now given, and if the course is extensive enough, credit might be given for satisfactory completion.

Besides a discussion of various campus organizations such as Student Government, the YWCA, and the A.S.A. association, a study of the history of Winthrop, which is certainly important to every Winthrop student, might be made. Talks similar to the one on vacations given by Mr. John G. Kelly at the last meeting of the freshmen class would be helpful to all freshmen. An orientation program of this type at the University of South Carolina is taught entirely by students and if such a course at Winthrop could be taught by upperclassmen, both pupils and teachers would receive training.

I hope that in the future the orientation program at Winthrop will be expanded so that it will be even more helpful than it has been in the past.

Sincerely,
Betty Romanthine

BRAVO FOR THE WORK OF THE SENATE Dear Campus Town Hall,

The passing of the new smoking rules on the campus has caused many sighs of delight and shrieks of joy. It is good to see Winthrop progress and change; it is good to see more responsibility placed on the girls for their own conduct. It is up to us now to show our President and all others who have given us this vote of trust that we do appreciate our new privileges and that we will not abuse them.

The Senate, the legislative body of Winthrop, also deserves a hearty round of thanks for the work they have done this year. They have done a splendid job of representing Winthrop students and their desires and wishes for certain changes. Our hearty thanks to you! It has boosted the morale 100 per cent.

Sincerely,

The lack of inspiration for the writing of a column is amazing in its quantity. The typewriter is loaded, fingers are on the trigger, and the safety catch is off, but no report of a bang. Could it be the robin in your tree? Maybe it's the four-leaf clover hanging from my blue jean pocket. Tried a walk out to the farm lately? That's where the real four-leaf clovers live. They didn't bring us rides back, though. Aching feet are just the excuse for extra spring fever. Ho hum.

The Word Is Hot

The Sun Is Shining Brightly, And So Is Your Peeling Mug

By JOANNE WATKINS

Friday 12:30—Let's see now—oil, vinegar, witch hazel, peroxide, Murine—(Don't get excited. These aren't ingredients for a cake or some ungodly concoction.) Oh, yes, blanket, towel, magazine—that must be all. No, Nel le Don isn't moving out—she's just gonna take a sunbath—if possible, that is.

12:35—Now for the battle—as she charges out on the fine white gravel of Rodkey Beach, she stumbles over and on unpeeled inert carcasses of girls in various stages of undress. A survey of the situation proves that the only available space is the extremely wide and "Oh-so-comfortable" cement railing.

12:40—Oh heavens, she forgot her hairpins. Well, she'll just leave her stuff on the railing and come right back.

12:45—There she is rather precariously balanced on the edge. Now for the vinegar, then baby oil. "Ah-h-h-h! That sun feels heavenly," she says. "Oh, roommate, do, like an angel, get the cotton for my eyes," she pleads.

12:50—She can just see herself with a beautiful golden tan when Bill comes up this weekend. "Are you as hungry as I am? Oh, all right, all right, I'll get some food," our heroine groans.

12:55—Nel le Don decides to read a good story in "McCalls." "No, I had better get my parallel book for English read," she says to herself. "Oh, Roommate, (sweetly spoken)—that is! Oh. O.K. O.K. O.K. (Ugh! QUO VADIS—who cares WHO GOES, anyway?)

1:00—She thinks she'll settle down for a nice nap. "Oh no, it's too much to take. I'm going to get a leave of absence and go to Pawley's," she decides.

Saturday 11:00—This time she's determined to get a tan. She's got a good spot, too. (If at first you don't succeed try, try again.)

12:00—That sun sho' is bright on her eyes. With that thought our heroine drops off to sleep.

12:30—"Huh? Play some bridge? O.K., lemme get my stuff. Golly! I look like a lobster," says Nel.

1:30—Groans are heard from the room of a certain sun worshipper. "Oh-h-h-h! My eyes! I knew there was something I didn't like about that book—the print is too small. That blanket was wool, too. Ouch! Be careful with that Noxema. Blistered? Whaddya mean? I was only out in the sun two hours. Oh, no, Bill isn't here already, is he? What will I do? My mother told me there'd be times like this, but what did she down for a nice nap. "Oh no, it's too much to take. I'm going to get a leave
